Chapter 1 by ɪʒɛ cɔld

sometimes

Sometimes , Our precious gems get swept away.

By the allure of attention.

Then bumped and bruised by insecurity.

These gems fight against this current home

Sometimes it's just too strong

These gems remember the bright luster of love they already had.

The mighty current of misconceptions preys upon these gems.

Misery sweeps in always hoping to destroy these happy pairs.

Sometimes she wins

The currents are just too strong

Our gems become bruised and cracked.

The lovely gems at home feel the distance?

And wonder how they've gone wrong

The love they had was pure.

Our returning stones

Confess thier cracks
In hopes to be forgiven, mended.

But here comes ole misery breaking pairs apart
Breaking the pure opals heart with Thoughts of insecurity and regret
Run from these tainted waters that appear to be sweet
They'll crack you apart.
